

How could you politicians ever have decided to turn the Law Courts Inn restaurant into commercial or political offices? That public space has not only offered respite from the frenetic chaos of Downtown Vancouver, but has also provided an unparalleled and staggering view of that Downtown core...a view which cannot be replaced. And while dining at the 1931 Gallery Bistro at the Vancouver Art Gallery is very pleasant, it is no match for lunch at the Law Courts Inn restaurant and the view from there. It is always one of the spaces where I first take out-of-town guests.

If you actually proceed with this abhorrent plan, you will have Arthur Erickson turning in his grave. And given the lockdown/ semi-lockdown crisis, I am very sure that the BC Government could easily find additional office spaces elsewhere.

Your feedback would be most appreciated.

PS. And, btw, should you proceed with your horrible plan, I will do everything in my power to see that Judy Darcy does not get re-elected in the next provincial election. RS
